Today was the day for domestic violence calls. We had three of them. The first was a female who stole her boyfriend's phone and punched him in the head a couple times. She was located in the area and arrested for domestic battery and grand theft. The second was female who was already wanted for domestic battery, including assault with a deadly weapon. She came back today and was breaking things in the house. Officers located her and booked her on several charges. The third was verbal only according to the parties involved, so it was documented. Besides these calls, officers stayed busy with self-initiated activity, which resulted in one male going to jail for warrants.

SUPERVISOR COMMENTS

The shift started off being busy, but it again quickly slowed down. this allowed my graveyard officers to finish some much-needed follow-ups. Additionally, officers performed extra patrols in certain areas of town that have showed an uptick in criminal activity. Only one arrest was made tonight, and that was for an outstanding warrant. Officers also responded to an injury accident that occurred in the northern part of town. Luckily the injuries were not life threatening, and no indication of either driver being under the influence was present. The collision did close down a major roadway for a short period of time.
